IBM Patent Disclosure for SNIA Storage Management Initiative Specification (SMI-S) ver.
1.4.0 rev. 4

IBM, in support of SNIA intellectual property policies, supports a full disclosure policy for published patent applications and issued patents with Essential Claims when developing SNIA specifications.

IBM's intellectual property disclosure is based upon the working knowledge of those individuals actively involved with the development of the SMI-S ver. 1.4.0 rev 4 and does not represent the results of an IBM patent portfolio search.

IBM hereby identifies the following which along with any foreign counterparts thereof may contain Essential Claims necessary to implement the SMI-S) ver. 1.4.0 rev 4 specification, as currently defined and understood:

US7,269,612 "Method, system, and program for a policy based storage manager"
US20070244939A1 "Method, system, and program for a policy based storage manager"
US20070244940A1 "Method, system, and program for a policy based storage manager"

IBM will honor applicable license obligations as defined by the SNIA IP Policy with respect to Essential Claims, upon written request, if the SMI-S ver. 1.4.0 rev. 4 is designated as SNIA Architecture. This includes granting worldwide nonexclusive licenses, under reasonable, and non-discriminatory terms, for use of Essential Claims, in accordance with IBM's then current and usual licensing terms, for compliant implementations of the SMI-S SNIA Architecture specification.

A party wishing to request a license should contact:

IBM Director of Licensing
IBM Corporation
